JOYSON SAFETY SOLUTIONS PVT. LTD

Joyson Safety Systems (JSS), formerly known as Key Safety Systems (KSS) is an American company owned by Chinese Investors, that develops and manufactures automotive safety systems. The company is a result of KSS purchasing troubled Japanese airbag company Takata Corporation. It is owned jointly by Joyson group (China) and PAG capital (Hong Kong). The company headquarters is in Auburn Hills, Michigan, United States. Globally, the company has 50,000 employees who work in 32 plants and technical centers worldwide.^[3] The current JSS Executive Director and President is Guido Durrer.

JSS is owned by Ningbo Joyson Electronic, described as a "Chinese automotive conglomerate" that acquired Key Safety Systems in 2016 for $920 million. The combined sales of both companies are more than $3 billion. Ningbo Joyson Electronic competed against other large companies in the industry including Autoliv and Daicel to acquire Takata. JSS was initially founded as Breed Corporation in 1961 by Allen K. Breed as a defense-oriented producer of ammunition components, including mortar fuses. In 1968 Breed Corporation, using their fuse technology developed an electromechanical airbag sensor. The sensor was not widely used until mid-1980s when the United States government had a federal mandate for passive restraint systems. Following Breed Corporation's success in developing the first automotive crash sensor in 1984, the airbag sensor part of the corporation was spun off as its own corporation in 1986 as Breed Automotive Corporation (BAC). Joyson ANAND Abhishek Safety Systems(JAAI) is a joint venture between Joyson Safety Systems, USA and the ANAND Group. During the past decade, JAAI has established itself as a supplier-of-choice when it comes to high-quality safety products, such as seat belts, airbags and steering wheels. Dedicated to securing human lives, we continually work on improving our products built using Japanese expertise. Our USP lies in our ability to localise and customise our products with Indian terrains.
